The Motion to Quash the Informa-tion to be Filed Wednesday or Thursday. Maj.-Gen. and Assistant Attorney-Gen-

cal William Goat Cook staggered into the Criminal Court this morning, creat-ing an impression by his peculiar appear-ance that he was intoxicated, but this time it appears, that he was sick. He approached and held a whispered consultation with District Attorney Corkhill, and almost im-mediately afterward, when the court was called to order, Col. Corkhill arose and lost at policy, lost his hat and lost his box, and staggered listlessly about F street near Fourteenth. While he was quietly engaged in talking to Mr. Kettler, for whom he has frequently done chores, when Officer Loftus approached him, and, without any apparent reason for the roughness he displayed, grabbed him by the lappel of his coat, threw him to the ground, arresting him.

Dayls struggled to defend himself and made it very lively for the policeman, although not much more than half his size. In a few seconds a large crowd on foot and in vehicles thronged about the two struggling men and seemed to enjoy the free matinee performance with a keen zest. The policeman was compelled to use his baton, and blood flowed from the bootblack's forchead. Fi the order, and intend to move to quash. Having received no previous notice of the intention of counsel on the other side, we are unprepared to meet the issue, and I now ask that the court shall issue an order that whatever motion counsel for the defense proposes to make, that the Government shall have two days notice thereof."

Judge Cox : "Very well, sir; the order will be issued."

The motion to quash is already prepared and is in the hands of General Totten. It will be submitted to the court on Wednesday or Thursday next if an opportunity is offered. It will be based on the ground that the recent filing of information before presented to the grand jury was unusual, and that the facts alleged and set forth are insufficient to maintain the action.

GARFIELD'S DEATH-BED.

Rev. Isaac Errett Says He was a Royal Priest of God and Needed No Clergyman. Rev. Isaac Errett, who delivered the fu-Rev. Isaac Errett, who delivered the funeral oration of President Garfield at Cleveland, aldressed a large audience yesterday at the Richmond-street Christian Church, in Chucinnati, upon the death of the late President. He said much anxiety had been expressed to hear something from the death-bed of President Garfield; some last words that would reaffirm the faith and convictions of his life. Comment had been made, too, upon the absence of religious talk or ministrations beside the dying. The speaker thought too much attention was given to mere death-bed declarations. Far better than any death-bed testimony is the grand life of James A. Garfield. Through the caution of the President's physicians no risk was permitted, and he died without any formal farewell message or testimony. But it is known that at the beginning he asked to know the worst, saying: "You know I am not afraid of-death." We know, too, that when the Lord's day came he said to attendants: "This is the Lord's day; I have great reverence for it." It may not be known that one Sabbath, at Elberon, when he lay with the sea rolling before his window, and heart from the chapel near-by the hymn, "Jesus, lover of my soul," he recognized and quoted the words, "Let me to thy bosom fly, while the waters neare roll; while the tempest is still high." To those who believe in the efficiacy of human priesthood, there must be regret that President Garfield had none of the ministrations; but the President himself did not feel such a need, nor do we. It would have been comforting to the living to have had his but the President himself did not feet such a need, nor do we. It would have been comforting to the living to have had his pastor beside him at the last; but we know that James A. Garfield was himself a royal priest of God, by virtue of his anointing as a Christian, and needed none, save the one mediator between God and man, to intercede for him with the Father.

The President's Movements.

President Arthur drove for an hour yes-President Arthur drove for an hour yesterday in Central Park with his law partner, Mr. Knevals. It is the first time that he has left his house in Lexington avenue since his recent arrival from Washington. He looked very much in the need of fresh air. As he came down the steps he was recognized by persons returning from afternoon service, and in a moment a crowd collected and gazed with curlous eyes at him until the carriage turned the corner. On his return to his house another crowd greeted him. While ascending the steps two lady friends congratulated him upon his accession to the Presidential chair. He greeted them kindly, but said in a sorrow-understand that such was his intention. It will not be surprising, however, if the President's private business allows him to go to the Capital to-day, as it is said that he is very anxious to get away from New York. He reasserted yesterday that his business here had been entirely of a private character.

Politicians and the public were, however, loth to believe that such was the fact. "The time when a new Cabinet must be announced is so near at hand," said one Senator, "that it does not seem possible that President Arthur is in the city attending to nothing of a public nature; especially when nearly all of his most intimate friends, and those with whom he would advise, are within a moment's call."
